- ii. the Grand Prize for All Countries will be redrawn on the date, and in the manner, specified in clause 29.

If a redraw is required under this clause, the "new" winner and his or her travelling companion must also comply with this clause.

If the "new" winner and/or his or her travelling companion do not comply with this clause or Novespace, acting in its absolute discretion, determines that the "new" winner and/or travelling companion do not have the required level of health to participate in the Novespace flight, then the Grand Prize for All Countries will be forfeited and no further winners will be drawn.

- i. the South Africa Grand Prize will be forfeited by the winner and cash will not be substituted in lieu of that prize; and
- ii. the South African Grand Prize will be redrawn on the date, and in the manner, specified in clause 29.

If a redraw is required under this clause, the "new" winner and his or her travelling companion must also comply with this clause.

If the "new" winner and/or his or her travelling companion do not comply with this clause or Novespace, acting in its absolute discretion, determines that the "new" winner and/or travelling companion do not have the required level of health to participate in the Novespace flight, then the South Africa Grand Prize will be forfeited and no further winners will be drawn.

Where a prize is unavailable for any reason, the Promoter may substitute for that prize another item of equal or higher value as determined by the Promoter in its absolute discretion.

You are about to take part in a parabolic flight.

Being in good health is required and a medical examination is mandatory.

Only your treating physician or an authorized aviation medical examiner can perform this examination.

Note to authorized aviation medical examiner: this medical examination is not a “pilot” aptitude examination. Class 2 certificates will not be accepted.

These flights last between 2 to 5 hours and the human body will undergo several variations in g-acceleration.

Validity period:

2 years for people aged under 40 at the date of the medical examination

1 year for people aged 40 and over at the date of the medical examination

Mandatory examination:

- For all: an electrocardiogram less than a month old at the date of the examination
- For people aged 65 and over: an exercise ECG done less than a month at the date of the examination

You will find in the document:

- a letter to give to your doctor
- the parabolic flight medical certificate (no other document will be accepted)

Letter to the doctor

Dear Doctor,

Your patient wishes to take part in a zero-g flight (parabolic flight) on board Novespace's Airbus A310 ZERO-G. We need your opinion concerning your patient's medical aptitude to take part in this flight.

Your patient must produce an ECG less than 1 month old at the date of your examination. For people aged 65 and over, an exercise ECG less than 1 month old at the date of examination. Your decision about the aptitude shall take into account the interpretation of the ECGs.

- What is a parabolic flight?

The aircraft flies at an altitude of 20,000 ft to 26,000 ft (pressure on board is similar to a commercial airliner). In flight, the pilots perform between 15 and 45 times a special maneuver by which the aircraft follows a parabolic trajectory, during which the passengers are in microgravity for 22 seconds. Each microgravity phase is preceded and followed by a hyper gravity phase, of 20 seconds each, where the passengers will be subjected to close to twice their weight (1.8g).

- Is this activity hazardous and stressful?

Similar to any aviation activity, this activity carries a risk. However, parabolic flights where weightlessness conditions are recreated have been carried out for many years, and no accident has been reported to this date.

As the flight includes acceleration changes between 0 and 2g, this activity generates fatigue, and increased fatigue in passengers prone to motion sickness (5 to 10% of passengers). However, in the United-States, children may take part in flights from the age of 8, and many senior citizens aged 80 and more have flown. In France, passengers are admitted from the age of 18. This activity may also be stressful, and rare instances of tetany have been observed (less than one in 1000 passengers).

- What physical consequences may be expected?

During hyper gravity periods, an initial decrease in systolic blood pressure and tachycardia occur. The cardiac workload increases by close to 70%, and transient cardiac conduction and heart rate disturbances have been observed (PVC in particular). At lung level, the work of breathing increases. When lying down, the passengers feel mild chest tightness. Repeated hyper gravity phases create fatigue.

Some passengers experience the symptoms of motion sickness, in particular if they fail to comply with the instruction to keep their head steady during aircraft accelerations. These passengers are then escorted to their seat, and in most cases the symptoms remain moderate and temporary.

During microgravity phases, shocks between passengers or against the cabin walls may occur, and although it is padded, falling to the cabin floor may be hard.

- Deciding on whether a patient is fit/unfit

To help you decide if the patient may take part in parabolic flights, the table hereafter lists some disorders or conditions which may rule out or be cause to postpone parabolic flights or require a specialized opinion.

- Upon completion of your examination, we suggest you make one of the following three decisions:

Fit: Your patient is in good health, and any condition the patient may have will not, in your opinion, interfere in flight.

Unfit: Your patient has a condition which, in your opinion, will compromise his/her safety and health in flight.

Not sure: You cannot decide: please contact Novespace, we will tell you how to submit your patient's file to the parabolic flight medical commission.

After the review of the file, the parabolic flight medical commission will make the final decision.

- Documents to give to your patient:

The certificate (see next page) and the ECG or the exercise ECG for patients over 65.

If you have any questions relating to this medical procedure, or for additional information, please contact Novespace at +33 1 44 76 75 37.

Thank you for your cooperation.
Regards,

The Novespace Team
